PROJECT: BESPOKE WORKSPACE

A WORKSPACE USING THE ENTIRETY OF RECLAIMED TIMBER AND THE DESIRE FOR AN ENTIRELY UNIQUE SPACE

PROJECT OVERVIEW

We were approached by this international Asset Management company when they were refurbishing their offices. They were looking for something that had character, and that was of the highest quality, which could be used for flooring, cladding, and bespoke desks.

HOW WE HELPED

Seaforth, from our Rare Finds portfolio, was ultimately specified due to its unique story and historically-impactful qualities.

We reclaimed Seaforth from a disused warehouse on the Liverpool docks. This location played a huge role in the British industrial revolution, providing a port for all manner of materials to arrive and leave the North of the country.

In previous years, the warehouses in the area were used by the timber industry to store wood from all over the world. In World War II, the dock endured heavy bombing which led to fire damage. This historical damage was still present when we reclaimed the 20 feet longleaf pine beams, evident in the blackened sections of some of the timber.

OUTCOME

As Seaforth was one of our Rare Finds, it meant that it wasn't going to last forever, with each of the floors in this collection being a one-of-a-kind piece. This workspace used the entirety of the reclaimed timber and the desire for an entirely unique space.

OUR CERTIFICATIONS EXPLAINED - RECLAIMED SUSTAINABILITY

Reclamation is a principle incredibly dear to us at Woodworks.

Not only is it where we began and blossomed our woodworking skills, it represents our sustainability mindset. Reclaimed wood flooring and wall cladding reduces environmental impact through re-use.

The wood is salvaged from the reclamation site, be it a historical building, warehouse or colonial home, before being transformed into a reclaimed floor at our English workshops.

This gives reclaimed wood a continuous lifecycle.

Many years ago, it was manufactured and installed into old buildings. It would be maintained here for decades before demolition took place, which is the key stage for us.

From here we recycle the wood, putting it back into the manufacturing stage, restarting its lifecycle again and again and increasing the longevity of the wood.

Then, throughout the years the reclaimed wood can age gracefully within your project and can even be re-worked, re-sanded and re-finished to inject new life. This does not only give woods a new lease of life, but prevents the need for more excessive numbers of trees being chopped down.

Whenever the cycle should cease, the wood is 100% biodegradable, helping your project reach carbon neutrality.
